WELCOME

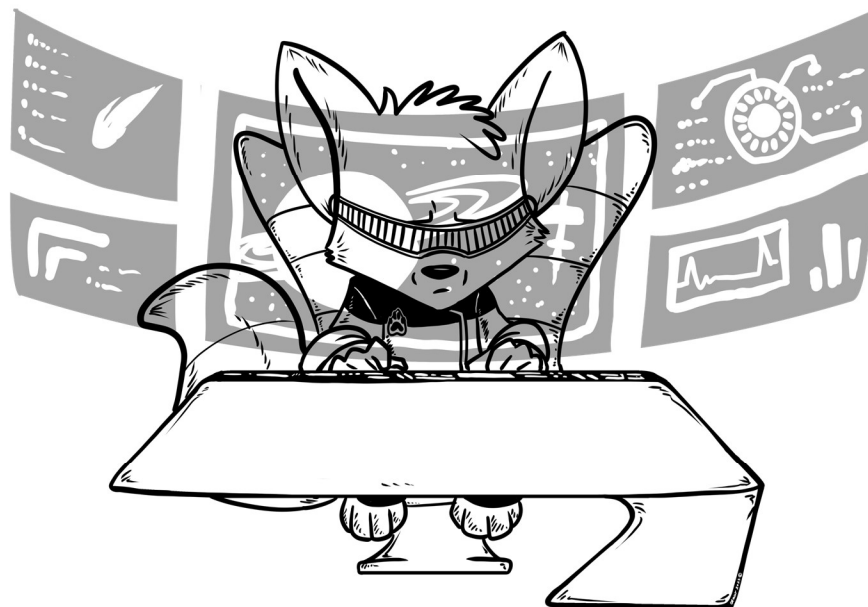

Letter from the Chairman

Gene Armstrong

Since the first person looked up at the stars we have wondered; what and who is out there? For over a hundred years our favorite science fiction writers have told us how they imagine the cosmos could be. Then we went to space to see for ourselves, in an incredible display of ingenuity that continues to this day. Walking on the moon was but “one small step,” as today’s engineers are working on sending us back to the moon, onward to Mars, and beyond, no doubt inspired by those same science fiction stories.

We have fantastic guests here to let us know what is happening in space now. Guest of Honor Laminar Fox is working on NASA’s Artemis lunar program (note: according to him and others, there are many furs working at NASA). Guest of Honor Dan Dubrick is a space historian, who has spent years talking to people about space programs all around the world.

While Furlandia’s theme this year is all about space, it’s more than real world space programs. It’s a gathering of furry sci-fi geeks to have fun and talk about your favorite space-themed fiction. From anime and tv shows, to movies, books, and video games, let’s all have fun and learn about space together, both the science of how it is, and the fiction of how we hope it could be.

GUESTS

Daniel D. Dubrick

Aerospace Historian

Known to many in northwest US fandom since 1980, Kahboi (pronounced Cowboy in English) has for many years been the editor for the H.R. McMillan Planetarium's affiliated space and astronomy educational BBS "SpaceBase™". At the peak of Fidonet's success, the results of Dan's editing effort were reaching out weekly to over 5,000 amateur bulletin board services worldwide with a readership estimated in the tens of thousands.

As an accredited journalist representing SpaceBase, Dan has witnessed space launches, including the Space Shuttle. He has done presentations and panels at numerous conventions, including WorldCons, NASFics, Westercons, and many other pacific northwest conventions.

Laminar Fox

NASA Materials Engineer

Laminar Fox is a Materials and Contamination Engineer for NASA's Artemis Program, focusing specifically on the Space Launch System Core Stage and Exploration Upper Stage.

Over the last 9 years, Laminar has worked for NASA and its subsidiaries, with the last 6 years focused directly on the Artemis Missions, which plan to return humanity to the moon and open up the Gateway to Mars.

Paints, primers, adhesives, foam, sealants and all the like, Laminar has tested it (but not tasted it!), making sure the materials are up to spec and ready for space travel.

Hailing from New Orleans, Louisiana, Laminar dove into the fandom headfirst 8 years ago and has become easily recognizable with his bright orange fluff or readily heard in the lobby playing clarinet in fursuit. He is easy to spot, usually toting around an orange slice of varying size.

When not parading around as a bright orange fox or building rockets, Laminar enjoys online gaming with friends, being a game master for a local Dungeons and Dragons campaign, and touring friends around New Orleans. Laminar is always friendly and enthusiastic when in character (and even out of character!) and can usually be trusted to offer hugs to fellow furs.

Syllys Sable

In Memorium

In remembrance of Mark "Syllys Sable" Merlino, a Father of the Furry Fandom. Syllys is a founding member of the first anime fan club in America, the Cartoon Fantasy Organization, which gathered artists and fans of anime and anthro characters over the continental US, starting up several chapters across America. At the 1985 Westercon, a science fiction convention, he hosted Furry room parties, gaining traction that led to the creation of newsletters and magazines.

Syllys co-directed the first Furry convention in modern history, Confurence, January 21 - 22nd, 1989. He also connected Furrries all over the world through FurryMUCK, VRC, Second Life, and VRChat.

Syllys has left an ever lasting impression on what we know as Furry today, and will be missed by everyone who knew him. He leaves behind his partner Rod "Vinson Mink" O'Riley, and many other loved ones.
