I Feel Weird: Strange Desires from the Golden Age of Animation

 Hilton Atlanta: 3rd Floor (255 Courtland St NE, Atlanta, GA 30303, USA)

Come join us for a screening of "those" cartoons - you know the ones. The ones that made you uncomfortable as a child. The Looney Tunes that stirred up uncanny desires you'd never felt before, and gave you feelings that didn't have a name. A loveless lovebird wants desperately to be swallowed whole by a voracious puddy tat. A potion is consumed, and a tiny mouse begins expanding his horizons. There are wolves in sheep's clothing, bunnies beyond binaries, and buzzards under the thrall of mesmerizing emanations.

Do you remember the one where death was the happy ending? Do you remember when existential fear first felt warm? Tonight, the glow of the TV will be our full moon, as we unwind tight coils of VHS tape to unleash lost memories of transformative Saturday mornings. Your host Auryn will overshare stories from childhood while guiding you through the classic cartoons that launched a million kinks. This is where you came from, remember? And don't miss the 16mm screening of a very rare, very foxy, and very unsettling film you won't see anywhere else. So bring your sublimated yearning and your PJs – we'll bring the milk and cereal! I'M NOT A FURRY (BUT I AM A FURRY) AND WHO ARE YOU (AND WHERE AM I): Is Irony Useful or Lame?

in Current Year, slip-sliding between irony and sincerity on the internet is par for the course, for better or worse – but how do furries use irony? Does being a furry mean taking yourself more or less seriously? How can irony be useful, and how is it used to mask more unsavory intentions? Why does any of this even matter?? HEY I'm Fruitbowl and I'll be breathlessly covering these points and MORE in this Powerpoint-accompanied talk, followed by a Q&A! Come check out one of the panels of all time – FUN IS GUARANTEED Room : Panel Room 8 (309, 310)

Skeptic's Guide to Tulpas

 Hilton Atlanta: 3rd Floor (255 Courtland St NE, Atlanta, GA 30303, USA)

Have you heard about tulpas? Did you stumble across these so-called 'sentient imaginary friends' through a creepypasta or a funny forum post (or this panel in your schedule) and emerge confused or curious? Is it really possible to create another person in your head, or is it just an elaborate hoax? And if it's real, what does it feel like? I used to wonder the same things - and the only way to know for sure was to try making a tulpa of my own. So I did, and I'm eager to share what I found! In this panel, I'll peel back the memes and mysticism to reveal the objective, down-to-earth truth behind these fascinating psychological phenomena. Citing research papers and applying anecdotes from my own 7-year journey as a host of two tulpas, I'll cover where the practice of tulpamancy came from and how it might work, how it re-entered the modern zeitgeist as a hobby, what separates it from other forms of plurality such as DID, and how it feels to go through the tulpa creation process and live with a tulpa of your own. At the end of the panel, my tulpas and I will take questions from the still-curious about our own personal experiences. Skeptics are welcome - this panel is for you! Note: Following the theme of skepticism and keeping with the majority of research that has been published on the subject, this panel will not delve into anything metaphysical and will only consider tulpamancy as a purely psychological and explainable phenomenon. Room : Panel Room 7 (311, 312)

Wagahai wa Neko De Aru!: Cats (and other animals) in Early Modern Japanese Literature

 Hilton Atlanta: 3rd Floor (255 Courtland St NE, Atlanta, GA 30303, USA)

In this panel we will take a look at the way that anthropomorphism is used in the works of Natsume Soseki (1867-1916) and Miyazawa Kenji (1896-1933), two very different voices in modern Japanese literature. Specifically we will be exploring Soseki's early novel "I Am A Cat" and how he used his nameless feline protagonist to observe and judge the intelligentsia of the day. We will also take a look at Miyazawa's original fairy tales and celebrate the way that he incorporated animal characters and used them to share his world view of unity and cooperation. Sad, Drunk and Needy: Virtual Reality made some of us feel like that stronger than ever before. Crushes, simping, rejection, partying and jealousy. Digital queer love, as real and juicy as the analogue one! WHSPRS will be performing songs from his new album "Sad, Drunk and Needy", including the VR-scene hit "Fox Boy"! The LP is heavily influenced by the fox' childhood in a landscape of 2000s pop, pop-punk and emo. Lyrics about almost teenage-like love struggles give insight into the VR artist's chaotic lovelife and subsequently portraits the dating reality of a new generation of queer, tech-savy individuals who surf the wave of relationship issues on a new frontier of love: Virtual Reality.
