My Kids a Furry What's Next?

 TBA

It's a common enough story for parents around these parts: you are scrolling through the internet history and you catch a glimpse of an anthropomorphized (made to appear human, humanoid) animal... animals... Holy cow, that's a lot of handsome foxes. You dig a little deeper and discover that maybe your child has a "sona" and all that allowance money hasn't been going to video games like you thought, but to commission art. And then the thought settles, the danger thought, "Who is my child talking to online...?" Activate parent panic mode, throw the router into a volcano, no more internet for anyone, ever. Join a Licensed Professional Counselor for a discussion about the complexity of parenting a furry kid and balancing affirmation with accountability.

Designing the Nowhere Inn: How Nuclear Facilities Are Built for Humans

 TBA

Nuclear facilities are often discussed as machines, but they are also carefully designed workplaces where people spend long hours in isolated, high-reliability environments. This panel explores how nuclear plants are intentionally designed around human behavior, attention, fatigue, and error prevention. Drawing from design and refueling experience, the discussion will cover control room layout, workspaces, lighting, noise, and procedural design. Special attention will be given to refueling outages, when facilities temporarily function as dense, high-stress communities. The panel will examine where design assumptions succeed, where they fail, and how human factors shape safety outcomes.

Pup Play Psychology: the Why Behind the Woof

 TBA

Nearly every con that offers AD or 18+ panels has had some kind of pet or pup event: they're typically meet-and-greets, or how-to guides for common practices designed for an audience of all experiences. We'd like to do something else entirely. In this panel, we hope to investigate the psychological and sociological phenomena which make pup play fun, and which make it such an emotionally important part of many of our lives. Both presenters are published researchers and have an appetite for the academic. The body of research which can help explain the mechanics of pup play is surprisingly large—spanning from B.F. Skinner's groundbreaking 1963 paper on operant conditioning, to Darren Langdridge and Jamie Lawson's 2019 phenomenological investigation of pup play. Combining contemporary human- and animal-behavioral research with our own experiences, case studies, and interviews, we hope to illuminate not just how pup play is done, but why it's so appealing: making the science accessible to a wide audience of practitioners who might not know exactly what goes on under the hood. We plan to cover the following topics, as well as to incorporate a content-appropriate, audience-led behavioral demonstration: CULTURE We'll recount pup play's origins in the BDSM community, its evolution from a subculture into a unique practice, modern diversity, and the impact of technological advancements in both digital and analog spaces. (Langdridge & Lawson 2019; Hammack & Wignall 2024) IDENTITY We'll investigate the transformative components of identity present in pupspace, explore different approaches for creating and embodying a different persona, and dissect the culture's social aspects. (Sapir-Whorf Hypothesis 1929; Matchett & Berkowitz 2023; Wignall & McCormack 2015; Cook & Jaspal 2022; Hammond, Hammond, Wassef, Ferlatte 2024) CONDITIONING We'll explain the difference between classical and operant conditioning, how positive and negative reinforcement or punishment can shape behavior, and how humans are equally trainable as dogs. (Pavlov ~1890; Skinner 1963; Milgram 1963; Thorndike 1905; Premack 1965; R.E. Whalen 1971) MEMORY We'll compare and contrast different methodological strategies and their effects on the brain, its cognition, and retention of events and behaviors in context. (Baddeley 1992; Gupta & Cohen 2002; D.L. Schacter 1987; Mayer, McCormick, & Strong 1995) PHYSIOLOGICAL We'll transition our discussion to one of the body, physicality, and memories stored in it, focusing on the nervous systems and their stimulation. (Berliner 2024; Langdridge & Lawson 2019; Dunkley, Henshaw, Henshaw, Brotto 2019)

📍 TBA

This introductory Erotic Rope Arts (bondage) panel is a hands-on participation class (just observing is also perfectly acceptable) that will introduce you to the basic “tools” (ties) every rigger needs to know; a single column tie, double column tie, the reverse tension, and extending rope. We will then “play” with different ways to use your new toolkit that do not require any “formal” patterns. Along with teaching these tools, we will review safety and precautions associated with rope bondage. This workshop does not require any prior knowledge of rope bondage to participate. If you would like to participate hands on rather than just observe, bring along safety shears and 2-4 pieces of 7-8m/25-30ft rope. Some extra rope will be available to borrow during the class. Those participating will be doing so under the principles of R.A.C.K. (Risk Aware Consensual Kink).

Authenticity, Society, and Furrries

 TBA

Have you ever felt imposter syndrome, or like you're not a "real adult?" Have you ever felt like you're "broken," or that there's something uniquely wrong with specifically you? That your inability to connect with yourself and others is a "you problem?" Believe it or not, if you feel this way or ever have, you are so very far from alone. We've all grown up in a society that often fears authenticity and genuineness, and most if not all of us have felt these things in some ways. And worst of all, it often teaches us that the problem is specifically us - that if we just "fix" ourselves, then all will be well. This panel presents an alternative view on the obstacles that make authentic relating so difficult - one which focuses not on individuals, but on the forces that shaped us all. The hope is that knowledge will empower viewers to make conscious decisions on how we want to live in this world, both as individuals and as a community.

Club FWA: LOVEBITE

 TBA

Operating on the time-honored principle of "make your own fun", LOVEBITE was founded two years ago when a couple friends sought to fill a hole in their local community with a furry club event in Boston. The goal of its organizers (Echo, Watauga, & Braeburned) has always been to provide a DIY queer nightlife space that encourages all forms of self-expression and engagement with a diverse community, drawing on shared experiences to bring the magic of a convention suite party or popup rave back home. LOVEBITE prides itself on promoting both genre favorites and alternative sounds not often represented on the mainstage with one goal: to make everybody move. For more information and to keep in the loop with LOVEBITE's events in the northeast, visit their website or join their Telegram group and announcement channel.

Sober Intimacy

 Hyatt, Hanover Hall C

Cuddles, deep conversation, sensual touch. Sex. These were the ingredients chosen to make the perfect (for some) intimate experience, but somewhere along the way we added an extra ingredient to the concoction, Chemical X. And thus, a bunch of stuff happened and now we are in recovery. But when intimacy has been wrapped up in drug and alcohol use, or maybe even only accessible because of those substances, intimacy in sobriety can be difficult. Join a couple folks in long term recovery to explore the adventure that is reclaiming intimacy in sobriety.

Club FWA: «CONTAIN»

 TBA

«CONTAIN» is a VRChat rave built for everyone who loves to lose themselves in music and visuals. Officially launching in July 2024, Contain has deep roots in VRChat’s underground scene, bringing together staff and guests from all over the world. While much of our team comes from the furry community, you don’t have to be to join the party, in our world, everyone is welcome. If you love harder electronic music, you’re in the right place. Contain is all about Hard Techno, Jersey Club, Schranz, Drum & Bass, Dubstep/Riddim, and much more. Expect high-energy sets that keep you moving from the first drop to the last beat. The vibe is pure boiler room energy, with liminal-inspired and boiler room style venues that make the music hit harder. We’re always pushing the boundaries of what visuals in VR can do, so whether it’s your first rave or your fiftieth, «CONTAIN» is an experience you won’t forget.
