 Convention Center – 1st Floor – 5-7

Most of us have heard about how to care for our fursuits, but what about the person inside of the fursuit? Fursuiting can involve activities that increase our internal temperature, increase our heart rate, and put our bodies under a lot of stress. But things you can do before, during, and after fursuiting can help you to fursuit longer, recover faster, and get back out in your fluffy carpet sooner. They say that Fursuiting is cardio, and like cardio we can make fursuiting easier and more fun by following precautions and preparing ourselves. Some of the stuff I'll be covering: Hydration basics (Gatorade has what now?) Under the fursuit (Please wear something) Working up a sweat (In and out of the suit) Post suiting (It's gotta end at some point...) What to do if you do overdo it (Don't freak out) Whether you're a newbie or someone who's been suiting for a while, come and learn how to better take care of what's under the colorful capet of fur! Got your own experiences and recovery methods? Come share them!

Fursuiting (301) in Action: Theories Behind the Fluff

 Hyatt – LAX

Welcome to Fursuiting in Action, a panel that seeks to bring fursuiters together to learn about the leading edge theories of fursuit performance. Experience with fursuiting is highly encouraged for attendees to grant the largest benefit. This panel aims to provide communal awareness and knowledge to how fursuiting works, how it draws in the attention of others, and make successful fursuiting scenes in both public and con-space settings. This panel is highly interactive and will require volunteer fursuiters (both partial and full) to ensure its success! In this session in particular, our host, the King of Purple, will divulge his latest theories of fursuiting, attempt to explain how these work with attracting crowds of onlookers, and take audience fursuiters on stage to 'prove' and demonstrate how these theories work! We will be covering the following theories of fursuiting through the course of the panel. With each of these we will pull volunteers out of the audience to perform them and learn with the hosts: 1. Theory of Character Performance a. States of Suiting (Active Vs. Inactive) b. Energy Levels (Low, Med, High) c. Engagement Levels (Solo, Peer, Group) 2. Theory of Character Appearance a. Fursuit Attire b. Fursuit Presentation 3. Sub-Theory of Fursuit Props a. Fursuit Prop Display b. Fursuit Prop Use 4. Theory of Public Entertainment a. Natural Performance b. Attention Attraction With any theory work, we are not saying these are correct, but we challenge everyone to give us feedback and reflect on how it works and develop your own theories too! Note: No Pre-Reading is required, however you can certainly read the attachments if you wish!

Despite having no adult content, Little Troubles! is an adult-only game and IDs will be checked on in the tournament area, please bear that in mind! There will be two tournaments available to compete in that will be run simultaneously: (Beginner Tournament) For brand new players there will be a starter deck tournament where you can enter any of the 4 starter decks, there will also be around 20 starter decks available to borrow if so get there early if you don't yet have cards. (Advanced Tournament) This tournament will be for more experienced players who have built their own decks. You may also enter a pre-built deck into this tournament as a beginner if you so choose. Tournaments will be free to enter and will be sponsored by the game's creator with both a participation prize for all who enter and a grand prize awarded to each of the two winners of their respective tournaments, however since this is not being run directly by the creator of Little Troubles TCG the tournaments will be more or less unofficial and for practicing the new game and meeting fellow players. Either tournament may run long depending on how many enter but will be sudden death and players can forfeit a by-round to their opponent if they are ready to leave. Both tournaments will be at "First Grader" difficulty, that means 40 card decks and all rarities and cards allowed. So far nothing is banned from tournament play so you can be first to find the game's meta. Cards can be purchased at MFF at the Poofy Pins store in the Dealer's Den! This panel is intended to be a meetup/audience participation offering out our own possible explanations as to this interesting fashion choice for cartoon animals.
